

Moses B. Winston

Moses is an experienced attorney, leader and an aspiring optimist. He has practiced law for nearly 10 years and currently is a Senior Associate in the Albuquerque office of Ray | Peña | McChristian, P.C. In his law practice, Moses represents clients in all areas of civil litigation, including insurance, business disputes, and professional liability.

Prior to his work in private practice, Moses was appointed to several senior executive positions in state government, including General Counsel and Legislative Coordinator and was responsible for legal, policy and operational issues for several state agencies. In these roles, Moses advised elected and appointed officials on matters including policy and legislation, risk management and personnel. Moses was appointed a Special Assistant Attorney General and served on a legal team that provided a successful defense of the state's governor in a writ of mandamus filed in the New Mexico Supreme Court involving a Class III Gaming Compact.

Moses was born on a Naval Base in Guam USA. Growing up throughout the United States, Moses credits his father, a career officer in the Air Force, for his discipline and work ethic and his mother, a nurse, with his good nature and sense of humor. Moses is a lifelong athlete, and his joy of competition has supported many endeavors in his personal and professional life.

In his free time, Moses likes staying active, being outdoors and providing amateur critic reviews on the latest movies.
